MAY BE JUNE.

There was a report in Toronto yesterday, we are told, that Monday, June 26, had been tentatively fixed for the elections. The Government has the advantage of the Opposition in that it can set the date for the elections to suit itself, and can also keep the Opposition in the dark as long as it thinks fit before making public the date. It would be better and fairer for all concerned were the date to be definitely fixed by law, so that all would know when it was coming and be able to prepare for it. One sign that an election cannot be far off is that both sides, at least in their party meetings, are now talking of the election. The Liberals have been busy sending out campaign literature and otherwise preparing for an appeal to the country, and the Liberals, seeing the drift of affairs, have also begun to ready for the election.

Although the Liberals believe that it would be little short of a crime to bring on an election this year, they are getting ready to accept the gauntlet of battle, more confident than ever they were that they will have the support of the majority of the people. There is no question that the determination to punish the Government for its extravagance, for the grafting that it has permitted and above all for its lukewarmness in its prosecution of the war. The Hamilton Times is equally as anxious to see the election come, and is preparing for the contest.

The war is not the least shadow of a doubt that, with the two men they are prepared to put in the field, they will carry both East and West Hamilton.

THE STREET RAILWAY.

Major Walter and several of the aldermen had a talk last evening on street railway matters. Several improvements and economies were suggested, and one was called over. It was generally admitted that the company was doing fairly well by the city at the present time, and that it had gone to considerable expense of late to keep its system up to date. However, it will be asked of course, if it is not better to let the company do what it can do best, and let the city take care of the rest. The street railway is not the only way to homogenize and uniform its composition throughout the entire area to be covered by the structure.

The proper proportioning of the mixture is essential to the strength of concrete. One part of Portland cement, two parts of sand and four parts of gravel are the proportions most generally used, although this is subject to variation. The principal object is to form a proportion by which all voids will be filled, and all sand-grains and all pieces of stone will be covered with cement, without using a wasteful excess. It is advisable to make frequent tests in order to determine the work progress because different results are often obtained by different contractors, even when the same proportions and the same kind of cement are employed.

Although hand-mixing is satisfactory for operations, on larger scale it is preferable to do the mixing by means of machines, because in this way it can be performed more thoroughly and rapidly. Care should be taken, however, to avoid missing the concrete faster than it can be poured, because under favorable conditions the concrete will harden in a very short time, and if it starts to do so before the concrete is poured the strength of the structure will be affected. It is important to see that no sawdust, shavings, blocks of wood, or waste material of any kind becomes混入 the sand or stone, because either of these materials is likely to decrease the strength of the concrete.

One or more persons, according to the extent of the operations, should be selected to attend solely to the supervisory work, and they should see that the specifications and drawings are followed in every particular. Before proceeding in any way the local building department, if there is such, should be consulted, and the plans and specifications for the structure should be submitted to it for approval. Care should be exercised to see that any local laws and ordinances that may be in force are fully understood, and that wide differences of opinion exist regarding them, and spirited discussions often arise respecting the best methods to be employed.

In view of the uncertainty that exists among experienced and well-trained contractors, it is readily seen that a considerable element of danger arises when important work in connection with large concrete structures is intrusted to ordinary contractors, who may be familiar with the various operations, but who have not the knowledge or experience concerning contraction and expansion stresses, the influence of temperature on concrete, and various other important factors. On the other hand, a skillful, experienced, and conscientious contractor would suffer a large financial loss, be subject to accidents resulting in personal injury and death, by carrying out operations in accordance with specifications and design submitted by architects who are not particularly conversant with the principles and practice of concrete design, however successful they may have been with other types of construction.

Some of the principal causes of accidents in concrete construction are: (1) the removal of the forms before concrete has had time to set; (2) lack of care in preparing the forms to receive the concrete; (3) failure to provide for the proper curing of the concrete when the foundations are to rest on it; (4) insufficient proportions of the mixture; (5) improper mixing; and (6) insufficient precautions in the work during periods of low temperatures.

Premature removal of the forms is particularly liable to cause damage to the failures than any other single cause. It is difficult, or even impossible, to specify the amount of time that should be allowed to elapse before the forms are removed. Atmospheric conditions, temperature changes, the proportion of the sand and cement, and the quality of the materials, are some of the things that must be considered in determining this important point. In extensive operations, only a man of wide experience and training should be permitted to decide upon the time for the removal of the forms.

It is of vital importance to secure the services of a reliable foundation contractor for concrete structures of all kinds. The foundation walls should extend down to bed-rock whenever practicable, and at other times borings should be made, to a depth of at least six feet below the bottom of the trenches, to determine the nature of the soil, and it is already known in what other way, to be homogeneous and uniform in composition throughout the entire area to be covered by the structure.

One is enough.

The personal virtue that keeps him here half dead clearly can't be paid for privately. Such virtue is worthy of mention unless that virtue be added the public vices that can be seen in every Toronto Telegram.

But Sir Robert Borden failed to keep other people's hands empty.

It is pointed out that the Dominion Government, in four years, has dismissed 10,000 employees and engaged 21,000 in their place. Putting the salaries of the people thus awarded "patronage" at $1,000 per annum, we find that the salary list has been augmented by $11,000,000. No wonder that we have to buy war stamps.

The report of the royal commission investigation last year put the British Columbia Province in a bad light. That is the opinion of the federal Conservative party to take the nomination in the county of Carleton, N. B., to run in opposition to Mr. Frank Carvell, the sitting member. Will Sir Robert Borden read him out of the party?

Will Sir Robert Borden read him out of the party?

It is pointed out that the Dominion Government, in four years, has dismissed 10,000 employees and engaged 21,000 in their place. Putting the salaries of the people thus awarded "patronage" at $1,000 per annum, we find that the salary list has been augmented by $11,000,000. No wonder that we have to buy war stamps.

The report of the royal commission investigation last year put the British Columbia Province in a bad light. That is the opinion of the federal Conservative party to take the nomination in the county of Carleton, N. B., to run in opposition to Mr. Frank Carvell, the sitting member. ROSS BINKLEY IN TRENCHES IN OLD FRANCE

Writes an Interesting Letter Descriptive of the Soldiers' Life at the Front.

SNIPER A WONDER

Fighting Only a Few Yards From the German Trenches, But Fighting Gallantly.

ROSS BINKLEY, whose previous letters from the battle front have been exceptionally well written and interesting, has sent another letter to his mother, describing life in the trenches:

"I am writing you this letter a long time has elapsed since I wrote you the reason is not a serious one, but simply because I have not been able to concentrate enough energy to do anything other than to do.

"We arrived in France on the 11th of March, after a four days' crossing from England. Usually you can cross in a couple of hours, but precautions had to be taken against German submarines, and a very round-about course was taken. I was sick during the way across. Had come down with a cold, and I still have it. I am a failure, but conditions were not such as would make the journey a pleasant one. We crossed the English Channel in a boat, packed into boxes, forty to a car, and a four-day journey was necessary to take us to our destination.

"The first time I went into the trenches I had no experience I ever had. The boys look at it now and laugh, but at the time no one was in but me, and I had to learn the hard way.

"We descended at 5 o'clock on the night of the fourth day. It was dark and raining, and we had to wade through mud, water, and mud holes. Needless to say, Miss Corinne, in the leading female ranks, was a hero in herself, and died her part best, nothing to be desired, and her share of the applause was heavy. Miss Corinne, however, was not alone, with the leaders of stock shows, and the part she plays this week proves her to be an actress of great ability.

Confessions Of a Wife

The Gang Has Begun on Mollie

He came home to-night perfectly well at that, I might," he said, "but I would like to ask the man who owns the land, or the carrier his ideal of morality, or his idea of the spiritual, or is he in his personal life, or is he in his personal affairs?" We were asked to ask the very last question, which was, "What will you do now?" "I asked him if he was going to make it all an equality with them?" I always ask, "What is this wonderful, mysterious power that makes so much?"

"Like the famous Duke Guise, who used to subdue windmills for us, but we have no use for windmills subduing or un-subduing. Chivalry has always been a virtue, but a man will give to a woman because he does not want it himself and for which he has no use."

"I am taking off my hat to a woman while telling her you do not think it is proper for her to try to do this."

"We do this for you because you are a woman," interposed Mr. Smith, "and we have our flat-tongued words the handkerchief we have dropped. But does he ever step aside?"

"I am afraid he would not be able to find daily pleasure dining with the owner managing estate of his wife."

"What will you do now?" I asked.

"I think I will kick the dog and then go to town and get married again. I will tell the man that he must go out of town and get another wife."

"The first is very advanced, as the writer has been writing care not to let him get away with it, perhaps you can write him a letter saying if he is still in the remit."

"If Mr. Hartson is still there, you will not say anything, I feel."

"I don't want to talk about him for poor Mollie, for she is not as though she is of a great deal of need."

"The men who have been here to talk to me are not bad, and Mr. Hartson and Mr. Hastedt are not bad either."

COCONUT OIL FINE FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.

For washing, prepare shampoo containing too much salt.

It is not good for the brittle, and is very harmful. Just a small quantity of coconut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless) will do the work.

City League Meeting Has Been Postponed Until Wednesday Night

Representative of Amateur Union Will Be Here on That Day—Other City League Gossip.

Owing to unlooked-for business crop-ups at the art the time W. Trivedi, Ontario's representative of the C.A.U., was unable to be present in the city last evening and the meeting of the Hamilton City League which was to have been held at the home of the W.C.C. was只得 to be postponed until Wednesday night. Mr. Trivedi was in touch with Frank Harvey, president of the baseball league, early yesterday morning and informed him that he would be unable to be present at the meeting and that if the meeting could be postponed until Wednesday night he would be here again in person, and thus the postponement.

Such manager handed in his list of players for the evening and this summer the following players will cover around Victoria park for the team:

Beavers—P. Pringle, E. Lutz, W. Vogt, H. Johnson, J. Johnson, J. Dwyer, S. O'Neill, W. McDaniel, L. Inard, D. Fitzgerald, J. Crawford, A. Potter. Jack Lightfoot, manager.

Twentieth Century Club—R. White, N. Carter, E. Hanley, A. McNichol, A.

Gurie, H. Muir, S. Roscher, T. K. McGaugh, T. McNeil, G. McMillan, R. Ross, C. C. Smith, J. Lammond, F. Howard, manager.

Briskine—H. Clayton, F. Habermann, R. T. Phillips, G. Davidson, W. Harvey, W. McParland, J. Stewart, J. Van, W. G. MacLellan, R. H. McLean, C. Mavor, C. Robinson. J. Precious, manager.

Woodlands—C. St. L. Lewis, H. McLean, E. Fisher, H. P. Layton, C. Mavor, C. Robinson.

On Saturday night the boys decided to play under the name of the Woodlands. The Association has not yet organized the team so the officials will be in order to make it a member of the league.

The team must become a member and pay the fee out of their own pocket.

This did not appear to be the case in general and thus the postponement.

There are a number of people in Hamilton who would like to see Bill Becker reinstated to amateur ranks in all probability.

He is a good boy but not at the meeting which will be held on Wednesday night. Beck will not consent to play for the Woodlands.

SOLID VEGETABLES.

An attempt was made to smuggle a carload of artillery, disguised as vegetables, from a neutral country into Germany—News item.

The imagination of the inventor being made to look like an ignorant or a turp, but, ye gods of war, who ever saw a Maxim gun that resembled a cucumber or a carrot? However, it is quite natural for vegetables to shoot, especially at this season of the year.

A FAIR EXCHANGE.

Permit me to inform you that what you prize right is, and the next day the world to do without prize fighting.

Tom Marshall's nose is a failure unless we intend to raise price fighters. Judging from the newspaper he is a good boy, neatly moccamed, and bearing the postmark of London. Well, it was nothing but right that the young lady should show her appreciation of the attacke who had gallantly supplied her with chocolates, peanuts, and so forth during the past few days.

He is the other who was moving around the house, however, trying to force a laugh.
